

Out of the three choices which were given, my initial choice was winter! With the season of winter, I felt like I could express a character's personality more and how they feel about their environment.

Within my project making, I chose to design a non-binary character, so as viewers we can relate more to it. Male or female, whoever, we have a chance to relate to a cosy character like Squishy. With my character, It has a use of circular and oval shapes to make it a soft and warm character. We don't refer to it as scary, but rather cute. Everything rounded we refer to as cute and plushie-like, so 'Squishy' is someone you're comfortable talking to.

I am pleased with my outcome as I've never deeply explored character designing before, but it was extremely fun and I managed to create a character resembling something. However, I feel like I could have exaggerated the character's shapes a bit more to make it pudding-like or more circular - At the moment it's body being too stretched.
